

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 12

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR
16 November 1977

Bush looks to China as possible oil source

By United Press International

Washington
George Bush, former head of the American liaison mission to Peking, says he is convinced China has huge, untapped oil reserves that the United States could help develop in return for much-needed oil.

In a copyrighted interview in a recent issue of U.S. News & World Report, Mr. Bush also said Peking's leaders believe the United States is naïve and weak in its dealings with the Soviet Union. He saw no signs of relaxed Sino-Soviet tensions.

Mr. Bush, who recently returned from a visit to Peking, said Chinese leaders have a strong desire for improved relations with the United States and have a more relaxed attitude toward trade with Western powers.